Four of the jurymon in the star route case are colored men. But they are as intelligent as the professional jurymen of Washington, of which the city is full. The Hoa. Philo White who was a mem-

There has been a great change in New York city during the present winter, in regard to Denman Thompson's Joshua Whitcomb. He used to fill the theaters, but this winter he has played to empty seats much of the time. Joshua will soon ave to go on the shelf.

President Paul A. Chadbourne, of Amherst college, Massachusetts, died on Friday. From 1867 to 1870 he was president of the Wisconsin university. He was one of the ripest scholars in this country, and besides that had remarkable energy and great executive ability.

It has been arranged by a senate caucus in Washington, that Judge Davis shall resign his position as president of the senate in order that the republicans may select a senator to fill his place before adjournment. Judge Davis agrees to this and the democrats do not object. It will be understood that this action is necessary in order to provide for the presidential succession in case of Mr.

The spirit of the democratic party in congress is brought to light by the Chicago Times as will be seen from an editorial note in that paper as follows: "When the democrats in congress pretend that they have not been trying to obstruct tariff legislation, they pretend falsely. No intelligent person who has attentively followed the reports of preceedings can have failed to see unmistakable evidences of a settled purpose, not even skillfully concealed, on the democratic side of both houses, to prevent any action by the present congress."

NIPPED IN THE BUD.

A little scheme has been nipped in the and which will not be pleasing to Senator Cottrill, of Milwaukee. The bill modestly provides that every owner of a hotel or other building more than two stories it height, which has an elevator, shall construct a shaft for the same of boiler iron or solid brick masonry, to extend not less than six feet above the roof of the building. The shaft is further to be provided with an automatic opening at the top and with automatic doors of iron

The legislature will adjourn in about or wire to be operated by the elevator platform as it ascends or descends. It is also provided that the elevator shall be so constructed as to form at its base an air-cushion, to prevent injury in case of the breaking of the ropes. The penalty for disregarding these provisions is a fine of not less than $1,000 or more than $5,-000, or imprisonment in jail for not less than six nor more than twelve months, or both, in the discretion of the court.

The Milwaukee Sentinel says this arrangement has been patented, and that if the bill should become a law nearly every elevator in the state would have to be zeconstructed at a large expense, including those in stores which are mainly used for lifting goods, and every owner of a building would be compelled to patronize the The proprietors of the patent. It would give them a handsome business for the coming year. The hope no doubt was that in the excited state of the public over the Newhall house disaster, and the general feeling that stringent measures should be adopted for the greater security of life in hotels and public buildings, this measure would be hurried through without attracting much attention to its details.

We learn from the Sentinel that a menorial has been signed by a large number of business mon in Milwankee, asking the assembly to indefinitely postpone the bill, which will likely be done when its true character is known.

THE DECAY OF PROTESTARTISM.

One of the most interesting articles in the North America Review for February, is the article entitled "The Decay of Protestantism," by Bishop B. J. McQnaid, of Rochester, New York. Those who have any desire to see how a Catholic bishop handles a subject of that kind will find much profit in reading what the bishop has to say about the decline of protestantism in this country. The articlo is well written, and there is about it a spirit of fairness which every intelligent and unprejudiced reader will appreciate. Whether the conclusions that Bishop McQuaid arrives at are well-founded is not a point which we will attempt to argue here. What the bishop desires in his paper is to show by facts, and figures, and by the admissions of leading Protestants that Protestantism as a religious organization is decaying. These admissions come from every quarter of the Protestant denominations, and are employed to show that religious zeal in the church is on the decline. Bearing witness to what Bishop McQuaid says on the subject are many of the most prominent ministers in the Protestant churches. They admit, as many of us are compelled to admit, that many of the churches, once so strong in zeal and discipline are weakening under the influence of wealth and desire for the good things of the

A great many Protestants are willing to admit that Bishop McQuaid is more than half right in his conclusions that there is a great tendency in some of the Protestant churches to doubt and negation, and to indifferentism which almost borders on infidelity. But the point which the bishop counts the most important as tending to show the great falling off in zeal in Protestant worship, is the attendance upon church service, and here he makes comparisons that highly favor the Catholic church. When this subject was under discussion in Boston nearly a year ago, the "Advertiser" of that city caused a census to be taken by its reporters of attendance on divine worship at the churches in that city. In 160 Protestent churches there was an attendance of 75,572, and in the 30 Catholic churches 49,337. But this count hardly did the Catholics justice as only one mass was taken. In January 1881 a count was made in Philadelphia, and in the 131 Protestant churches there an attendance of 42,140 was in 19 Catholic churches and82,653. The accuracy of this court was caffed in question by the Protestants, and the Philadelphia Times sent its reporters to the churches in the city on the first Sunday of March of the same year, and found that in 53 Protestant churches there were 19,946 attendants, and in 19 Catholic churches 38,019. A count was made in St. Louis about the same time, and in 104 Protestant churches there was au attendance of 34,100, while in 34 Cathin cloth after the fashion of the transac. one churches there were 85,171. These investigations were carried on in New The state makes a mistake by binding | York city, Brooklyn, New Haven, Baltimore, and many other cities with about the same results. When the secular papers of New York bent, every energy a little over a year ago to get the facts bearing upon the decline of Protestantism in that city and Brooklyn, they learned that the growth of Protestantism

MUTINOUS FELONS.

Revelt of the Criminals Confined in the Peuitentiary at Jefferson, City, Mo.

The Building Set on Fire and a Mad Rush Made for the Outer Walls.

Fleeing Horde Halted by Guard and the Ringleader Cowed into Submission.

St. Louis, Feb. 24.-Mutiny broke out in the Jefferson City penitentiary, the sole state penal institution of Missouri, at noon yesterday. The convicts had just returned to the shops from dinner, when at a preconcerted signal Vanhorn, foreman of the collar thop, was seized by four convicts, who held knives to his throat and ordered him to keep quiet. The signal was passed on to the harness shop, where four convicts also seized the foreman, who resisted, and was badly counded and stripped of his clothing. The revolt was now well under way, and John B. Johnson, a safe blower, under twelve years' sontence from Shelby county for highway robbery, who organized the mutiny, at once sprang to the command of the mutineers and incited them to fire the building. The part of the harness shop where the horsecollars are made was seized by the mutineers, who piled the straw there amployed into stacks against the wooden partitious and fired them. In a very few minutes the whole harness shop, which is the property of a St. Louis firm, was in flames. Pandemonium prevailed. When the guards ran in with the hose they were met by the convicts, who, with hammers and such other iron implements as they could command, cut the hose. Johnson made an effort to escape over the walls, but, despite the fact that he had a knife and a club; and that he had declared his intention of never leaving the building alive if opposed, he was mot at the main entrance by Pat Krump, one of the guards, who warned him to desist from neiting his followers to further acts of mutiny. Krump was not armed, but as Johnson advanced with the howling mob of convicts be-bind him, he yelled to the ringleader: "One step more, Johnson, and you are a dead man." Johnson was overswed by this exhibition of plain norve. He hositated and was lost. On the moment he abundoned all thought of leadership of what at that moment was a successful revols, which in ten minutes could have freed every convicted felon of the state prison of Missouri, and turning upon his abject heels ran toward the northestat corner of the grounds, with the intention of scaling the walls. On his way be ran up against Jusso Tolin, the "dresser-in" of the yrison, who had sought the court-yard at the lirst alarm. Joinson paused and stood detant with his knife and bludgeon threatening to brain Tolin if the latter got near enough. Tolin is a small man, while the convict is a giant in build said strongth. But the plucky guard, looking his man square in the eye, walked up to him and placing the muzzlo of a couked revolver against his car, ordered him to walk to the blind cell. The convict oboyed, and with his surrender the revolt was at an ond. His companions were soon gotten under control. Among them were murderors, stage-robbers, burglars and other high-class criminals. The revolt was lardly suppressed when great volumes of smoke and there a shot he sevenward, and the whole of the moment he abandoned all thought of leadsuppressed when great volumes of smoke and famics shot heavenward, and the whole of Jefferson City rushed to the penitentiary, militia turned out and organized, and the citizons foll in and should red muskets, ready to prevent or suppress a mutiny of state convicts. The fire was quelled without any further demonstration of consequence on the part of the convicts, some of whom, frenzied with disappointment at the failure to cacepe, tried to rush into the famos of the burning buildings, and were with difficulty provented from seeking this howible form of death. As soon as it became apparent that the mutiny was unsuccessful, the convicts were formed into line, and at the word of command 1,150 of the 1,400 convicts were marched to whoir cells and locked up. The remainder were trusted to mid in the work of controlling the fire. So rapidly did the building burn that a few convicts were seriously, perhaps fatally. zons foll in and shouldered muskets, r the fire. So rapidly did the building burn that a few convicts were seriously, perhaps fatally, burned. Over fifty escaped from the upper windows from the factories. The flatnes communicated rapidly to the state machine shop and the factory where the cloth worn by the convicts is made. Then the broom factory went the way of the flane, and next the building occupied jointly by the Geisecke Shoe Manufacturing company and the Meysonburg Shoe company was talen in. This adjoins one of the main cell houses, and it was threatened for an hour. The heroic exertions of the volunteers and convict fromen saved the hospital. The Jofferson City fire department were on the ground and poured two streams into the confinguation.

The Jefferson City fire department were on the ground and poured two streams into the confinential.

The losses to the state amount to fully $300,COO, on which there is no insurance, while the losses to private parties reach nearly a like amount, which is almost fully insured. The despotate and therough character of the nuthry's organization is evidenced in the fact that after the ringleader. Johnson, was lodged in the blind cell some fifteen of the convicts managed to use a double key they possessed to the cell and released him and placed themselves is roadhess to follow his load. The desperate band made a dash at the guards, but were at once covered by the ropeating ritles and revolvers of the guards and were forced to surrender. At present the peniteritary is under the guard of its regulgrofficials, backed up by the military and a posse of two hundred citizous armed with regulation musicus. Gov. Crittendon is in command. His oxcellency was on the point of starting for St. Louis when the mutiny broke out, whereupen he postponed his trip and devoted himself to the pressing official emergency. For some time past, it is alleged, the management of the penitentiary has been of very severe, perhaps cruel character, and the outbroak will probably lead to an investigation and reformation.

After the fire was under control the prisoners

After the fire was under could During After the fire was under control the prisoners were returned to their regular colls. During the excitement Johnson, the ringleader, broke out of the blind cell, and attempted to incite a fresh outbreak. Hobtained by some unknown means a razor and iron poker, and attempted to kill a convict who rofused to assist in the revolt. He was finally overcome, placed in the duegeon, and the discipline of the prison is pretty well restored.

White the guards were attending to the discipline of the prison, the alarm was blown.

while the guards were attending to the discipline of the prison, the alarm was blown, and the great bell clanged out the warning that a mutiny was in progress in the prison. The telephone informed the people of the town of the state of affairs. Great volumes of smoke and flames shot out from the building and attracted attention, and there was a general movement toward the ponitentiary. Adit Gen. Waddell emptied the armory of guns, which with the armounition, immediately leaded into wagons, were herried to the prison, where plenty of willing hands were ready to receive them. In less than tom minutes lines were formed surrounding the prison walls, and senators, bankers, capitalists, morchants, and wood-sawyers stood shoulder to shoulder, prepared to vindicate the majesty of the law by putting a hole in any convict who dared make a beak for liberty.

The walls were covered by armed men, and from the reofs of the prison building gans frowned in a threatening manner. Luckir

The walls were covered by armed men, and from the roots of the prison building gans frowned in a threatening manner. Luckily there was no necessity for using these weapons, for the convicts, seeing the hundreds of armed men ready to assist the prison officials the pew holders who do not "go much on experimental religion." These are the chief reasons given by Bishop McQuaid

RERDELL.

Dorsey's Threat---No Trace of the Alleged Belford Check.

Washington, Feb. 24.—The crossexamination of Rordell was resumed in the star route trial yesterday by Col. Ingersoll. Referring to the interview with Dorsey at Willard's, the witness said he left the court room at the request of Dorsey, and went to the latter's room at the hotel. Dorsey locked the door and charged the witness with going over to the government, but said: "You reckon without your host. I have got you within my grasp and propose to hold you there; I can send you to the penitentiary for perjury: I have got those letters, and I propose to pubtish them. Now, I have written out what I want. I want you to go and copy it; take it to a notary public and swear to it; I can have you arrested before night if I so desire.". Rerdell said that he was completely crushed by Dorsey's throat. He supposed he could be prosocuted for porjury. In making the first affidavit, he did as Dorsey desired, and on the day following the interview gave the affidavit to Dorsey in Boslor's presence. Dorsey wrote in the words "and others," then striking a match, burned the pencil draft of the affidavit. Witness did not remember telling MacVeagh and Woodward that Dorsey gave W. H. Turner $1,500 or $2,000 shares of mining stock to inthence his official actiona; did show thom a memorandum to that effect; did not recollect telling Woodward that Doreey gave James M. Tynor $2,000 shares of the same mining stock to influence in some way his official action; remembered showing memorandum; the memorandum was in the hundwriting of S. W. Dorsey, and wis given witness by Dorsey. It was in Rerdell's deek at his office, when he was sent to jail, but he has not seen it since.

Col. Ingersolt called the attention of the court to the fact that it had been alleged that Rerdell initated Dorsey's writing. He referred to the statement made by witness Wodnesday, concerning Congressman Belford, whom ha (Ingersoll) believed to be a perfectly honest man. Witness had stated that a chock for $2,000 had been given Belford and the amount charged to "mail." Now the fact was that Dorsey had in his possession a pseudiar kind of rife. Delford saw it, and wanted one. Dorsey procured one for him, and in payment drew a check for $20. The check was for the rife, and was marked on the stubb against "J. B. B." That was the only transaction between them. Of course Belford did not know anything of the check, for it was not given to him, —but to the person from whom the rifle was purchased. Col. Ingersoll desired to go into the memorandum to show that it was made entirely by witness; that he used a pencil because it was easier thus to initiate handwriting and to show that no payments such as had been sworn to by witness had even been made to Belford, Typer or Turnor. He wanted to show that they could not have been made by Dorsey. These statements of witness had been put in the Associated Press dispatches and road by millions or poople. He thought it only fair that he be allowed to probe the matter to the bottom and put wirnesses on the stand to fell the truth.

Mr. Merrick said if the defense wished to windicate these gentlement they should produce thence his official actions; did show them a memorandum to that effect; did not recollect

Mr. Morrick said if the defense wished to vindicate these gottlemen they should produce the books. In his offerts to trace the 92,000 check, which Rerdelf said had been paid to J. B. Belford and S. dispatch:

EX-GOV. TILDEN.

Misconstruction Placed on His Attentions to Young Ladies. New York, Feb., 24.-Mr. Tilden has been spending the winter at "Greystone," his country seat. He'runs down to the city now and then to see how the work on his elegant new residence in Gramercy park is getting on-The interior of the house has been given up for some months to the decorators, artists and artisans, who are elaborating the detaits of its finishings and ornamentation. It is nearly completed now, and is said to present one of the most elegant interiors in the city, not excepting the new Vanderbill manaions. Mr. Tilden will move into town early in May to spend a month or two in his city residence before the dog days arrive. Comploto rest from public cares and from business, pursuits has greatly improved his health. Of course whenever there seems a fair prespect that he will live a few mouths longer, fresh reports of his approaching marriage are circulated. The latest sweetheart he has been provided with the course of the same above the same than the course of the same and the same than ports of the approaching matriags are circulated. The latest sweatheart he has been provided with is a young lady from Albany, whose name need not be mentioned here, though it has been published. It has been observed that several young ladies, and notably one in St. Louis, whose names have been connected with Mr. Tilden's, have been very proud of their sudden notoriety, and have regarded it as: a splendid and very desirable advertisement of the fact that they exist and are "charming, intelligent, and beautiful young creatures," of which matters the world at large had previously been ignorant. It is said that the old gouldman is a good deal annoyed by the serious interpretations that some newspapers are bound to put upon any trifling attentions he "pays to the fair sox. He cannot sond a lady a bouquet without its exciting as much attention as the celebrated Emma Abbott kisa. Mr. Tilden, his friends say, never was a society man, but his friends say, never was a society man, but be is fond of the acquaintance of a few accom-plished ladies, and his attentions to them are as delicate and courteens as could be wished. ### Silk Robbers Caught.

CHICAGO, Feb. 24, Two burglars left this city Thursday night for Joliot for the purpose of committing thatt, and took with them two trunks and a value in which to place the stolen plunder. Reaching the latter place they entered the store of N. D. Dyer, and robbed it of $3,500 worth of silks. The stolen property was at cace put in the trunks and value, and checked for Chiin the trunks and valies, and checked for Chi-care by the Chicago & Rock Island rafroad, the prisopers taking passage upon the same train on which their baggage was shipped. They did not take the precaution, to fill the trunks full, and when the baggageman hand-led the trunks, the bolts inside at-tracted his attention from the sound pro-duced by the plunder rolling around. PLAYING FRANK FORD.

The Interesting Game Invented by a Jersey City Juvenile.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Richard Miller, 12 years old, of Jersey City, has been a regular and onthusiastic reader of dime novels, and recently procured a second history of the life and achievements of Jesse James. This work produced a greater effect on his mind than any other that he ever read. On Wudnesday he stole $5 from his mother and purchased three revolvers and a box of cartridges. These he concealed until yesterday, when, after loading his weapons, he stuck them in the waistband of his trousors and started forth in search of adventure.

The first person he met was a little playmate named Joseph Eckhoff. He invited Eckhoff to take part in a new play called "The James Boys," Millor explained to Eckhoff that he would be expected to personate Jesse James, while he (Miller) himself assumed the part of Frank Ford. "All you have to do," said Miller, "will be to jump around as if you were going to tackle me." The unique sportwas sourcely begun before it was brought to an abrupt termination. As Eckhoff was prancing about the sidewalk in a frantic manner, as if preparatory to a furious ouslaught upon his enemy, Miller drew one of his pistols and took deliberate aim at him. "Josse James," he cried, "you are a dead man." With these words he fired, and Eckhoff fell with a scroun to the ground. that he would be expected to personate Jesse

The noighbors ran from their houses and gathered around the prestrate boy. It was found that the bullet entered the calf of his left leg, and was imbedded in the flesh. His mether told the justice that her son had no complaint to make against Miller, as she believed the shooting to have been accidental let Capt. Fairier arrested Miller on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, and discharging a pistel on the street.

A CLANDESTINE MARRIAGE.

Society in a Ferment Over the Latest

Cotham Elopement. NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—The marriage of Miss Kitty Kornockan and Mr. Horbert C. Pell Thursday morning was almost the sole topic of conversation in society circles yesterday. The social prominence of both the bride and groom, their well-known family connections, and their wide circle of acquaintances made the story of their elopement one of great interest. When the young Count Hily de Talloryand-Porigord was here in 1879 it is said he fall in lave with Miss Kernochan, and that his mother, the Princess Saugan, heard of it in Paris and recalled him at once. The story also runs that Mrs. Kernochan took her daughter to Paris and hoped that the friendship might be resumed, but the young people did not meet again. Upoh her returning home, Mr. Peli, who had meanwhile been attentive to Miss Lorillard, Miss Kernochan's cousin, ronowed his attentions to Miss Kernochan. To dispel susartentions to Miss Kernochan. To dispol suspicion, Miss Kernochan went at onco into socioty, and during the last season has been more potted and courted than ever. Her beauty, superb costumes, the wealth of flowers which she carried, and the attention she has received have made her prominent at the patriarchs' assomblies and other balls this winter. At the wedding Thursday the only witnesses were Mr. De Lancey, Mr. Pell's lawyer, and the sexton of the church. The bride was plainly but expensively dressed in a tight-fitting dark brown traveling suit. Mrs. Pell returned home, where she took luncheon with her family. In the afterneon she left the house and did not return. It is believed that with her husband she took the train for nor uncle's, Mr. Pierre Levillard's country the house and did not return. It is believed that with her busband she took the train for nor uncie's, Mr. Pierro Lorillard's country place at Jobtown, N. J.

When Mr. Kernechan learned of his daughter's marriage he went to St. Augustiae's chapel and demanded to see the minister in charge, "Mr. Kernechan seemed to forget himself," said Rev. Mr. Kimber. "He spoke in a violent way insisted upon knowing why I had allowed his daughter to be married, and demanded the register with the record of the marriage. I gave him all the information necessary and be then loft, still in an angry mood." Miss Kernechan is an hoiress to a large amount from the Lorillard estate, which will come to her at her mother's death. Mr. Peli is credited with having made a large amount of money in Wall street during the past year.

Last summor she received a brush at the hands of Freddy Goblandt, mester of the hounds, and during the season also received a mask and other trophics. Last summor Miss Kernochan distinguished herself by stopping a runawny horse. She was in a dog-cart with her 10-year-old brother, who had the rolts. The horse became frightened and ran down Bellevue avenue for nearly two miles Miss Kernochan in the meantime taking the rolts from her terror stricken brother, and guiding the horse past the carriages which lined the fashionable theroughfare, until by remarkable pressures of mind she threw the horse and then jumped out without injury. A Row in the Indiana Legislature.

Indianapolis, Feb. 24.—The sensa tion of yesterday in legislative circles was the aummary removal of the secretary of the souate, A. F. Kelly, of Terre Haute, and the doorkooper, Capt. W. M. Edimuds, and their employes, which was done by the Republican minority, aided by a few Democratic senators. Cyrus T. Nixon and Vincent T. Kirk were elected to till the vacancies, the former being a Republican. The cause of the revolution goes back to Feb. 1, when Kirk was deposed as doorkeeper by Mesers, Duncan, McIntosh and Benz, who voted with the Republicans to that end, on the ground that Kirk had abused his trust in appointing too many decirences. end, on the ground that kirk had abused his trust in appointing too many doorkeepers. Kirk's friends have been wanting to get even ever since. They found they could do this by forming a coalition with the Republicans, who agreed to vote for Kirk if Howard and his three allies would vote to depose Kelly and put in Nixon, which agreement was carried out. At the evening session, however, a compromise was made among the Democrats, and Mr. Kelly was reinstated as secretary, while Mr. Kirk will retain his position as doorkeeper.

The senate and house both passed the house of refuge bill over the governor's veto. The senate spent the entire afternoon session in discussing the bills providing for the abelition of the contract system of letting out convict labor, but no vote was reached. In the house the specific appropriation bill was under consideration in its preliminary stages.

The Sundry Civil Bill Tet in the House.

THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—The senate passed the naval appropriation bill, striking out all new legislation proposed by the house-The senate also resisted all attempts to incorporate new legislation made by its own committee. This will prevent the carrying out of the provisions of the existing law relating to clearing up the old yards. The action of the senite with respect to new legislation is in striking contrast to its former course, and is certain to result in sharp differences between the two lionses. Edmunds insisted inpon a technical enforcement of the rule. He is very persistent and arbitrary in this matter. The senate generally admice the wisdom of such a policy. There are many, however, who think that the spirit of the rule should be observed, and that there is a strict adherence to the letter which may tend down to defeat its purposa. The real objectof the rule is to provent extravagance and to make it impossible to form any combination which will competitive to form any to the risk of loning an appropriation bill. The technical enforcement of this rule has resulted in very considerable, expense rather than occording to the government. The last congress made-provision for closing some of and arbitrary in this matter. The senate salted in very constituted expense rate of than oconomy to the givernment. The last congress made-provision for closing some of the did and uscless navy-yards, and for disposing of some of the old material. Owing to a technical defect in the law of last year it is necessary to have a few words of legislation to enable the secretary of the navy to carry out this law. An anoundment which would have accomplished this was proposed, and adopted by the committee of the whole in the south; but, on motion of Edmunds, it was stricken out as new logislation. Representatives say that they shall object to the assumptions of the senate that it is the guardian of public morals, and that, before March 4, the senate will discover that the representatives of the public morals, and that, before March 4, the senate will discover that the representatives of the public are entitled to consideration. One member is so indignant at what he tion. One number is so indignant at what he calls the arrogance of the sounts that he is of the opinion that there may be danger that some of the appropriation bills may fall. But there is not likely to be any difference between the two houses which will have such a require result.

At the evening session the anti-polygamy bill was brought up, but no quorum was presont, and after ineffectual attempts to secure the attendance of a quorum, the secure ad-

Washington, Feb. 24.—The house devoted the whole day to the sandry civil appropriation bill, and will complete it the first king. A noticeable feature in the proceedings was the discussion over various provisions appropriating money for the payment of salaries of deceased members to their legal representatives. The question arose as to the propriety of appropriating money to pay the salaries of deceased members of a future congress. Mr. Miller, of Pennsylvania, vehemently protested against such a policy, and questioned the right of one Louse to determine the membership of the ubst. Mr. Flower, of New York, facetionally remarked that deceased members seemed to be the only ones legally entitled to their salaries. Notwithstanding the protests, over $10,000 was voted into the pochess of the better of legal representatives of deceased members.

PARNELL.

The Naval Bill Passed by the Senate- His Answer to Foster -- Criticisms of the Press.

> London, Feb. 24.—There was much excitoment in the house of commons at the opening of the session vesterday afternoon, as it was expected that Parnell would speak in answer to the charges made against him by Forster, Thursday, a large number of persons in the lobbies being unable to find room in the house. The strangers gallery and peers gallery were filled, and the seats of all the mombers were reserved. Parnell said the utmost he desired to do was to make his position clear to the Irish people at home and abroad. Forster, he said, ought to be ashamed for traducing him. He declined to reply to Forster's questions, and charged that gentleman with having asked him (Parnoll) to disclose the secrets of his associates. If Forster had believed that the articles published in The Irish World were likely to incise crime; why had he not stopped the circulation of that paper? He compared the responsibility of Forster, who had read the articles and believed what the result would be, to that of himself, who cover read them, though they were brought against him.

Parnell said Forster had unfairly singled on Sheridan as mentioned in the "Kilmanham troaty" negotiations. Why did he suppress the matnes of Davit, Egan and Boyton, also mentioned as likely to endeavor to prevent outrages in Ireland?

Forster exclaimed: "They were not mentioned by mentioned the mentioned for Clurck."

Forefer exclaimed: "They were not mentioned by me. O'Shea (the member for Clars), Boyton, Egan and Davitt were mentioned."

L'arnell continued: He had been challonged to defend himself, but he had nothing to defend himself from. He occupied a better position in the eyes of the Irish people than did Forster in England. Forster's unfairness was shocking. Parnell analyzed the oridence of Carey, which he said was not a statement of fact, but of belief or hearsay. It had been already disproved as regards Mrs. Byrne. The evidence in reference to the source of the "murdor fund" rested upon the fact that some men while in prison received checks from some men while in prison received checks from the sustenation fund of the Land league. Such the sustenation fund of the Land league. Such aid had been given thousands of prisoners. Poster's animus was due to the fact shat he attempted to obtain a promise from him (Parmell), but failed to do so and lost his office. As proof that the prisoners charged with the Phoesix part numbers were not members of the Land league, Parnell pointed out that one of them returned a check sent him from the sus-their returned a check sent him from the sus-tentation fund, saying he had nothing to do with the lengue.

Concluding, Parnell declared that the pres-ent efficials in Ireland wore manifestly unit to administer the crimes act. Forster ought to return to his congenial work. He was hopeful Ireland would weather this as she had weath-ored, other formidable oppression. Parnell spoke for thirty-five unintes. The prince of Wales listened to Parnell's speech.

Parnoll, Dillon and O'Kelly from Kilmainnam jail.

The Times says the marked rejection by Parnell in the commons Thursday, of the opportunity offered him for clearing himself from the discredit of holding relations with the Irish assassins, might be justified it his political conduct had been from the beginning above suspicion. The Coventry Times says it cannot be expected to view with favor the conduct which seems wanting in courage and cander. The Daily News says it understands Purnell has consented to reconsider his purpose of moving an amendment to the address in reply to the speech from the throne, arraigning the executive of Ireland for the administration of the crimes act.

A hooby is simply the development of a specialty. A man may make a specialty of a certain branch of trade or business, and yet not pursue it as a hobby. In fact, a man with a hobby is usually looked upon as a man who pursues one idea to the exclusion of all other, useful or otherwise. Much, how-ever, as he has been sucered at, he is the one of all others likely to make a great discovery, or invent something which the world in time will think almost indispensable. All or nearly all of our great inventions have been the work of men with hobbies, some of whom were during their lifetime looked upon by their acquaintances as insufferable bores, if not as nuisances or lunatics. If agriculture, as is sometimes claimed, is behind other industries, it is because fewer men have pursued some branch of it as a hobby. There are few farmers, it is true, who have specialties and engage in them with vigor, and, as a rule, these men succeed better than those who drift along easily without making an effort to excel in any special branch of agriculture.

The specialist makes more rapid progress than his neighbors, not because he works any harder, but because he is usually better informed in regard to his business for he cannot expect to excel unless he seeks knowledge from other sources than his own labors and experiments. Knowledge is but the accumulation of the ideas and experience of those who have preceded us, and the man who reads is pretly certain to learn something which he did not know, and, more than all, he will get the ideas out of which he can involve others, thus adding to the sum total of human knowl-

We confess that in our experience a man without a hobby is, as a rule, a rather dull fellow, and the more useful the hobby is likely to be, the better we like the possessor of it. We hall with pleasure the appearance of such men among farmers, for there is abundant room for them, and great discoveries must naturally come from close application and persistent pursuit of the end of object sought for There is scarcely a grain. fruit, or vegetable cultivated that could not be improved by judicious and intelli-gent management, and the same may be said of every breed of domestic animals. In addition, new varieties and breeds may be brought into existence whenever desired.

Of course we would not have a man neglect his business or impoverish himself, as some have done, in order to pursue an impracticable idea, but whenever it is plain that a better thing is needed than we possess, and there is a chance of producing it, it is a commendable act to make the attempt, even if a complete failure be the result. There are usually a hundred failures to every really great success, but this should not discourage any one from trying to see what he can do in the field where the failures are the most numerous. Thousands upon thousands of vessels have been lost on the ocean, but this has not prevented the building of great and successful ocean steamers. The inventors of reapers and mowers did not escape failures, some of which were disastrous; but these men had a hobby, and they pursued it until they triumphed over every obstacle. A farmer may raise a hundred new varieties of corn or other grain, not one of which will be in any way superior to the parent sort, and then he may try again, and the very first one will be far superior to anything of the kind he has seen, at least for his own farm and adjacent regions; for it should be borne in mind that a farm product or breed of animals may be adapted to one locality and not to another.

Our farmers are gradually coming to look at this subject of adaptation of plants and animals to certain locations, soils and climates in its proper light; hence the increase of late years of specialists among the more intelligent agriculturists throughout the country. Experience has shown that what is called general or mixed farming is not the most profitable anywhere. The reason is to be found in the extreme variation in our soils and climate. One farm or limited region of country may be well adapted to the growth of wheat and oats, another to coru and potatoes, while others produce excellent hay and pasture grasses. and are therefore especially adapted to the raising of stock and the production of butter and cheese. Then there are regions especially adapted to the raising of certain kinds of fruits and vegetables. all of which, when discovered, becomes of value to those who may choose to take advantage of circumstances.

If any farmer would select some particular breed of domestic animals to experiment with, or kind of grain, fruit, or vegetables, and make it a hobby, much good could scarcely fail to result from his efforts; and if he is fortunate enough" to produce something better than has heretofore been known, a financial reward awaits him. We want to see a variety of corn that will bear twice the quantity of grain and no more stalks and leaves than any now in cultivation. We are quite confident that such a varicty is within the range of possibilities. and the man who has the time and inclination to pursue such a hobby long enough can scarcely fail of success, provided he resides in a good corn-growing country: We are inclined to think that it can be done by selections alone, with some of our most prolific sorts. It may, however, require the crossing of two or more varieties; but this can only be de-

Considerable improvement has been made in wheat during the past few years, but there is room for a greater advance, as the larger proportion of our common varieties produce taller stems and more leaves than is necessary for the perfection of the small amount of grain they yield. This is shown in the dwarf sorts seen in the dry regions of the far west, where from forty to sixty bushels per acreare not uncommon, and where the wheat straw will scarcely reach two feet in length, counting head and all. Tall corn and tail grain may be well enough to look at and talk about, but unless accompanied by a proportionate amount of grain, they are less profitable than the medium or dwarf sorts. This rule holds good throughout the entire list of farm crops, and every farmer should look to these points in the habits of the plants he cultivates. The addition of two kernels of wheat to every head in an acre-would make a marked addition to the total yield. Lengthen the ears of corn on an acre one inch, and it would add ten bushels to the yield of our ordinary varieties. It is these slight additions, widely distributed, that count in making up the sum total of our crops.

It is not only the leading or principal crops that should be improved, but beans, peas, and generally all field and garden vegetables are werthy of the most careful attention. It a farmer can add one pod of beans to a stalk, it will be a satis-factory increase in yield. Suppose he plants his beans in hills, two feet by three, and four stalks in a hill, this wil give 28,840 stalks per sere, and if he can secure the addition we have named he will get just that number of pods additional. One pod extra per stalk would not be much to strive for, but 29,000 on each acre would amount to a good deal when threshing the crop. A few seconds in time made by horses has increased their value many hundred fold, and an extra quart of milk per day with increased richness has made many a cow famous, and sent the price of herself and offspring from the hundreds up into the thousands. We think every farmer should have a hobby of some kind, and while he is pursuing his regu-lar avocation, he can ride this hobby during his leisure hours, or do it for relaxation from his daily toil. Choose one if you have not done so already, and if you can find nothing better, select a bean; for, with all deference to the wisdom of the age, there are few persons living who really "know beans."-N.

Manufacturing of Charcoal.

Having had inquiries relative to the manufacture of chargoal on some former occasions, we give the following full de-scriptive account of the process as performed by skillful burners in North Wales, which we copy from the Gar-deners' Chronicle, Some useful sug-gestions may doubtless be obtained from this account by those engaged in the business in our timber regions:

Select a piece of ground sheltered from the prevailing winds, and to which easy access with wood can be obtained: A hut or temporary shelter of some kind should also be provided for the men engaged at the work, as during the period of burning constant attention is required both day and night.

The quality of wood used is not of special importance, although charcoal produced from ash, oak, or beech, is of superior quality to that obtained from most other woods, and may consist of firewood, or any unsalable pieces of timber that may be come across in the general course of thinning. The wood is sawn into pieces two feet in length, and these again split, if required, to about three or four inches square, until a sufficient quantity has been cut up for the pit, after which the building of this is proceeded with in the following manner: The pit is made of a conical shape, twenty-one feet in diameter and nine feet in height. A strong stake is driven into the ground, the top of which is left protrading about twelve inches; around this are placed small pieces of dry ash or pine of a similar length, and standing as close to the upright stake as possible. Another layer is formed in the same manner, and so on until a circle of about four feet in diameter is obtained. A circle of one foot in diameter, and having the top of the stake formerly driven into the ground as center, is next made by placing the wood horizontally side by side on the upright pieces, laying others on these in a similar manner until the pit is of the required height, thus forming abort of chimney, by means of which the pit is fired; the wood used here being dry pieces of ash, twenty-four inches in length, but split rather smaller than the ordinary pieces. Outside this the wood is placed on end and reclining inwards, this being continued until the pit is of the required size.

The top half of the pit is now carefully examined, and any crevices between the wood are packed full of small pieces of turf and sawdust to exclude the air. The pit is then covered with newly cut turf, beginning at the base and working towards the top, each row of turf overlapping by a few inches the previous oue, the circular hole or chimney being left open for firing. The best turf for this purpose is grown on loamy soil; that from clay being too stiff, and leaving a residue after burning of clods, instead of fine soil. The turf may be cut of any convenient length, but not over a foot in width, the quantity required being about three loads. The pit is then fired by dropping a quantity of burning wood and some dry pieces of pine or ash into the opening left at the top. After having become thoroughly lighted, the top turf is put on, which completely shuts up the chimney, when the process of charring commences. During the period of burning, constant attention is required day and night, more especially should the weather be stormy,. for the wind blowing for some time from one point generally causes that side to burn very rapidly and "flut" into a hole. Should this occur, the hole must at once be filled with knotted logs, which should be laid aside for this purpose when splitting the wood, and re-covered with turf, any crevices being carefully filled with sawdast to exclude the air. During mild weather less attention is required; the pit burns uniformly all over, and produces the best charcoal.

The time required in burning varies from seven to nine days, much depending on the state of the weather, mild requiring the longest period. As the charring proceeds the turf gradually disappears, until only a slight covering of burnt earth remains, at which point the pit is reduced to about half its original size. When cool the pit is ready for being opened, the charcoal being extracted by means of a light rake resembling a drag, but with much finer teeth; and after becoming thoroughly cool is stored in a dry shed until required for use. By the above method the very finest chargoal is produced, and of superior quality to what is generally sold.— Country Gentleman.

Unconscious Brain-Work.

Wordsworth has testified that his best poetry was created by allowing his mind to direct itself intently upon all the phases of his subject, and then waiting for a spontaneous outflow of poetical imagery from his mental mechanism. Mozart, whose musical faculty had from childhood been trained with most assiduous care, had only to think out the general plan of a composition, deciding as to the place to be given to solo, reci tation, duet, quartetie, etc., and then allow his thought to work of itself and evolve its own results. In the same way trained mathematicians solve difficult problems. But most instructive of all is the action of memory. We endeavor to recall some half-forgotten fact, name, or date. After fixing the attention upon the subject for a certain length of time, and recalling every accessible circumstance, we find it better to withdraw the attention, to "hang up" the subject, and leave the matter to time. The general result will be a sudden return of the missing fact to the consciousness. In all these cases of "unconscious cerebration," it is noteworthy that we must first give direction to the process, and, moreover, that in order to obtain results we must previously train the automata. -Lecture by Dr. Carpenter.

-For persons doomed to everlasting ridicule on account of diminutiveness of stature-for the "sawed-offs," the 'shorties" and the "snits" of societythe Louisville Courier-Journal kindly comes to the front with these cheering words: "In war the little man is not. perhaps, to be feared; but in love look out for the quiet, unobtrusive gentleman whose coat-tails nearly approximate the earth." Mr. Hanthorn took the remains to the Pember house, and this morning they were taken to Johnstown

-The friends of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Yeomans, of North Bluff street, second ward, planned and carried out a successful surprise party last evening. About twenty-five or thirty ladies and gentlemen congregated and made their appearance at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Yeomans, where they were pleasantly recaived, and the short hours of the evening happily and profitably spent in their company.

-There was another large audience at the roller skating rink lest evening, to witness the sport of the skaters. The exhibition given by Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Richardson, Mr. A. F. Smith, and Master Jackson, were really fine, and drew forth much applause. The rink will be open natil half-past ton this evening, and all who attend will have another chance to witness the performances of the above professionals, as well as the antics of some of the Janesville amateurs. It is worth your time and money to visit the roller skating rink. Good music will be in attendance.

-Hon. John Winans and Ogden H. Fethers returned last evening from Elkhorn, where they have been for a couple of days, engaged as the attorneys for the plaintiff in a suit before the Walworth county circuit court, in which William T. Washburn sued the village of Whitewater to recover damages for injuries sustained from an imperfect sidewalk. The case was tried before Judge Wentworth and a cution and dramatic art, Water street, jury, and a verdict was rendered in favor of the plaintiff, filing the damages at $1.500 which is one of the heaviest verdicts ever assessed in this state for like damages from a defective sidewalk. The detense was managed by Messrs. Bishop & Cravath, of Whitewater, and Mr. John T. Fish, of Racine. Messrs. Winans & Fethers feel highly elated over the verdict, as they proposed before the case went to triol, to settle with the defendants for four hundred dollars, but the proposition was rejected by the trustees of the village.

> -The funeral of the late Ella Elizabeth Boylan was held at St. Patrick's church which is about as good an average one as this forenoon at ten o'clock, and was attended by a very large number of citizens notwithstanding the cold rain prevailing at the time. About fifty of the members of the Young Ladies Sodality, of which the deceased was a member, met at the church, and marched in procession to the late home of the deceased, on Western avenue. The bearers were twelve in number, six young ladies, and six gentlemen, as follows; Misses Rose Keenan, Rose Reilly, Sarah Heffron, Mary Con. way, Mary Delaney, Kate Hickey, Messrs. John Madden, John Murtie, John Nash, Timothy McCue Jr., Ed Madden, and Willie Kennedy. The Young Ladies Sodality acted as an escort back to the church. The six young ladies received the coffin as it was taken from the hearse at the church and tenderly carried it to the bier in the church, and after the sermon, they in like manner returned the coffin to the hearse, where the gentlemen bearers received and performed the rest of the service. The service in the church consisted of requium high mass, and an appropriate sermon by Rev. Father McGinnity. The death of Miss Boylan is the first that has occurred among the members of the Young Ladies' Sodal-

FORTY PRISONERS.

That Number Confined in the Bock County Jail Last Night.

We visited the Rock county jail this merning for the purpose of ascertaining the number of prisoners confined, and also the towns and cities to which they are accredited. We were somewhat surprised when informed by Mr. Acheson, that he had cared for forty persons during the night, but had discharged three this morning, before our arrival. This is the largest number that have been confined in the jail, with one exception, for a long time. About the middle of January, Mr. Acheson informed us, there were forty-two confined, one night, which was the largest number ever in the jail at one time. We examined the jail register, and found the following names, with the date and place of commitment, and the duration of their sentence:

RECAPITELLATION. Janesville.....

The above detailed report of the committment of prisoners in our county jail is published for the purpose of contradicting the report that the officers of the city of Janesville make about all the arrests of tramps that are made in the county. By a careful reading of the register, can be taken, it will be seen that Janesville has not furnished as many, in proportion to the population, as some other parts of the county. We have been requested to call attention, for the benefit of officers and others interested, to an amendment to chapter 291 of the laws of 1881, which can be found on page 921. This amendment reduces the fees of officers arresting tramps to one dollar, and five cents per mile travel, and the fees of the justice of the peace to one dollar. By this amendment the fees have been reduced about one-third.

Detectives and Private Officers Usually wear their badges of authority concealed under their clothing, but Dr. Thomas Electric Oil wears its badges in the form of printed labels attached to each and every bottle, so that all may know its mission. It is given full and complete authority to arrest all aches and pains, and does its duty every time-Sold by Palmer & Stovens and Sherer & Co

The walls have been thoroughly cleaned and calcimined, and look as clean and white as it is possible to make them; the wood work repainted and varnished, and the furniture and desks and pigeonholes re-finished in oil. The vault doors in the offices named have been ornamented with the painter's brush. The rooms all present a handsome and inviting appearance. If the building committee would only continue the good work throughout the entire building, it would add much to its appearance, especially in the corridors. Mossrs. Vanderlyn & Lee have certainly performed a good job of work in the rooms mentioned above, and the appear-No. 2 Reg. Wht ance of the interior of the Rock county court house is much improved thereby.
